YOU TEACH A LESSON

Many people teach lessons without realizing they do. We do very few things without teaching by the example we set. An old saying goes like this: "Actions speak louder than words." We have all heard some loud professions concerning Christianity, but they were drowned out by the actions of the one making the profession. When you deliberately absent yourself from any service of the church, you teach lessons by your absence. This is true whether it be on Sunday morning Bible study, Wednesday night services, Sunday night services, or any time set aside by the church for such services.

Note some of these lessons:

1. You teach that this particular Bible lesson is unimportant.
2. You teach that what you do is more important than studying the Word of God.
3. You teach that a person can be a faithful Christian and still not be interested in the study of the Bible.
4. You teach that you already know as much as you want to know about the Bible.
5. You teach that, in your opinion, you have nothing to offer to others in Bible Study.
6. You teach that you are completely indifferent as to the success or failure of that particular study period. In fact, people will come nearer getting the idea that you want it to fail.

These lessons and more are taught to others both in the church and out of the church when you have the opportunity to attend Bible study and choose not to do so. My brother, what kind of lesson are you teaching?

John D. Cox
